

Richard “Dick” T. Schlosberg

Director, eBay, Inc., Edison International, Kaiser Family Foundation, USAF Academy Endowment, The Bank of San Antonio, Bandera First Bank, San Antonio Area Foundation, the Texas Biomedical Research Institute and the San Antonio Medical Foundation

Dick Schlosberg is the former Publisher and CEO of the Los Angeles Times and the immediate past President and CEO of the David and Lucile Packard Foundation, a position he held since 1999. The Packard Foundation is one of the nation’s largest philanthropic foundations. During his five-year tenure, the Foundation averaged more than $10 billion in assets and made over $2 billion in grants to non-profit organizations worldwide.

Schlosberg began his newspaper career with Harte-Hanks Communications in 1975. He became president of its newspaper operations in 1980 and served in that capacity until 1983, when he joined The Times Mirror Company as publisher and chief executive officer of the Denver Post.

In 1988, Schlosberg left the Denver Post to join another Times Mirror newspaper, the Los Angeles Times, as president and chief operating officer. After years of increased responsibility with Times Mirror, Schlosberg was appointed publisher and chief executive officer of the Los Angeles Times in 1994. He joined the Times Mirror Board of Directors one year later. When he retired, he was responsible for six newspapers (the Los Angeles Times, Newsday, the Baltimore Sun, The Hartford Courant, The Allentown Morning Call and the Stamford Advocate), with a total daily circulation of two million.

Both the Denver Post and the Los Angeles Times were recognized for excellence under his leadership. The Los Angeles Times earned the Pulitzer Prize for its coverage of the Northridge earthquake, produced nine Pulitzer finalists, and garnered many of journalism’s other top honors. The Denver Post won the coveted Pulitzer Prize Gold Medal for its coverage of missing children.

Schlosberg continues to be very active in civic and professional organizations. He is currently a board member of eBay, located in the Silicon Valley of Northern California, and of Edison International in Southern California, where he serves as the Lead Independent Director. In addition, he is Chair of the Board of the Kaiser Family Foundation and is a founding director of the United States Air Force Academy Endowment, a charitable foundation supporting the Air Force Academy. He is the past chairman of United Way campaigns in Denver and Los Angeles. His previous board affiliations include the Smithsonian Institution, BEA Systems, Junior Achievement, Pomona College, the USO and the Newspaper Association of America.

After returning to San Antonio in 2004, Schlosberg became a founding director of The Bank of San Antonio, Bandera First State Bank and San Antonio Capital Management. He also serves on the boards of the San Antonio Area Foundation, the Texas Biomedical Research Institute and the San Antonio Medical Foundation.

Schlosberg graduated from the United States Air Force Academy and earned a master's degree with honors from the Harvard Business School. He served five years as an Air Force pilot and is a veteran of the Vietnam War. In 2003 Schlosberg was honored by the Air Force Academy and named one of its distinguished graduates. He and his wife, Kathy, live in San Antonio, Texas and have two grown children and four grandchildren.